THOSE HEATHEN HUNS SURE ARE A MODEST LOT

Paris, July 3.—Great Britain must turn over its war fleet to Germany, return Gibraltar to Spain and restore Egypt and the Suez canal to Turkey, Great Britain, France and the United States must pay Germany an indemnity of at least $45,000,000,000, Belgium and French territory must be surrendered.

These are among the conditions included in the German peace program published in the Nachrichten, of Goerlitz, Prussia, by Count Roon, a member of the Prussian House of Lords, according to a Havas dispatch from Basle, Switzerland.

Count Roon says Germany is entitled to the following terms, because of its strength, and until they are realized there should be no armistice and no cessation of submarine warfare:

Annexation of Belgium, with administrative autonomy in the interior.

Independence of Flanders.

Annexation of the entire Flanders coast, including Calais.

Annexation of the Brie and Longwy basins and the Toul, Belfort and Verdun sections eastward.

Restitution to Germany of all its colonies, including Kaio-Chau.

Great Britain to cede to Germany such naval bases and coaling stations as Germany designates.

Great Britain must return Gibraltar to Spain, cede its war fleet to Germany, restore Egypt to Turkey and the Suez canal to Turkey.

Greece must be re-established under former King Constantine with frontiers as before the war.

Austria and Bulgaria will divide Serbia and Montenegro.

Great Britain, France and the United States must pay all of Germany's war costs, the indemnity being the minimum of $45,000,000,000. They also must agree to deliver raw materials immediately.

France and Belgium are to remain occupied at their expense until the conditions are carried out.

AUTO INDUSTRY IS ONLY QUARTER CENTURY OF AGE

Greentown, Ind., July 3.—The automobile industry will reach the quarter-century mark of its growth tomorrow. What is now America's third greatest industry dates from the invention in this city by Elwood Haynes of the first successful American automobile in 1893.

The idea of the "horseless carriage" was conceived while Haynes was the superintendent of a gas company here. His many necessary trips day or night regardless of weather or road conditions led him to seek more certain, less tiresome methods of travel.

He was a scientist and inventor of note at that time, having been particularly successful in original research work at Worcester (Mass.) Polytechnic Institute and at Johns Hopkins University.

Haynes bought a two-cycle marine engine and began construction of the motor car by adapting the engine for use on the road.

His experiments were attended with many predictions of failure for the project, even the mechanics who assembled the parts of the car being so skeptical that they demanded payment every Saturday night for the work done that week.

The initial run on July 4, 1894, was the culmination of a long series of tests and experiments by Haynes dating back even farther than 1893. The first car traveled 32 miles on a gallon of gasoline. It moved slowly, averaging between six and seven miles an hour, but that speed was considered marvelous then for a vehicle without a horse.

The first car was complete in all essential details. It had wire wheels, cushion tires, a carburetor and a muffler, the last being invented by Haynes. It had two speeds forward and as many reverse, for the new machine is reversed by reversing the engine.

BRITISH FOOD CONTROLLER DEAD

London, July 3.—Lord Rhonda, Great Britain's food controller, died today. The end came at 9 o'clock this morning.

Rhonda had been in failing health for several weeks as the result of overwork in handling the food situation. He became food controller June 15, 1917, succeeding Lord Davenport.

Rhonda died at his home in Llanwood Park, Wales. He had suffered from a rheumatic fever for several years, brought on by jumping into cold water to rescue a child.

SOFT FOR OFFICERS

With the American Army in France, June 15.—By Mail — When you get "K.P." in the army, you're usually sore. "K.P." means "kitchen police," and nobody likes the job. It's a penalty except in one place.

The "K.P." is an honor, and even officers vie for it.

In a certain Salvation Army hut "K.P." means you can go out in the kitchen and help the girls clean pots and cook. The girls first invited privates to do the work. The officers there decided otherwise. They always send the privates on detail elsewhere, and invariably there are commissaires "K. P.'s" in this kitchen.

AMERICANS DEFEAT HUN COUNTER ATTACK ON NEW POSITIONS

By Lowell Mellett.

With the American Army on the Marne, July 2.—Evening.—The Americans utterly demolished an attempted counter-attack on their new positions west of Chateau-Thierry this morning, taking 97 additional prisoners.

Our artillery laid down a terrific barrage that utterly cut off the attacking force, while the American machine gun and rifle fire annihilated them.

A number of light machine guns were captured in this new fighting reaching the total taken since last night to more than sixty. The final checking up of the Boche prisoners taken in last night's and today's operations is expected to show more than 600.

Last night's advance progressed farther at some points than was first reported. It is now established that the maximum penetration was about a kilometer and a half.

A counter-attack was under way this morning. American flyers successfully engaged nine boches. The fight lasted 35 minutes.

John McArthur of Buffalo, is credited with two of the enemy victims, while Albert Grant of Denton, Texas, and Jack Hoover of Nashville got the other. Donald Hudson of Kansas City, whose machine gun jammed, dived directly between two Germans who had maneuvered Fred Norton of Columbus Ohio, into a dangerous position and probably saved his life.

The fight ended with the remaining Germans fleeing to their own lines.

The warm feeling toward Americans held by the French population in this region is established in a letter from the mayors in the aux district to the commanding general.

"The people will not forget the beginning of June when the invaders threatened their homes and the American troops stepped victoriously forth and saved them," the letter read.

"The mayors and eye witnesses of these generous, efficacious deeds send their heartfelt admiration and gratitude."

WHEN THE AMERICAN LADS AREN'T ATTACKING GERMANS THEY CERTAINLY CAN MURDER REAL "HOME-MADE" PIES

Salvation Army workers serving pies to U. S. soldiers at front.

There's a smack of home and a taste like "more" in the pies the American boys get at the front. The Salvation Army workers in the field rig up ovens back of the lines and turn out real honest to goodness homemade pies while the boys wait patiently to get them. Army leaders say that this service helps just like hundreds of other kinds of service to keep up the morale of the boys in the trenches.

WAR WILL BRING NEW EDUCATION

New York, July 3.—A new education will be one of the products of the war, according to Prof. A. D. Dean, noted educator and author, member of the faculty of Teachers College, Columbia university.

"The war is exposing the usefulness of uselessness from the direct service standpoint, of our school subjects. This world conflict is bringing out the relation of education to war. It comes to the schools as an opportunity to develop service to the State," said Prof. Dean today.

"Now we have extension courses in economical cooking for adult women as a war measure. Later we shall have it as a home measure. Now we are bringing adult women into the schools to receive instruction with their children. Later we shall do the same thing because it is the only sensible procedure under any and all conditions. Now we think in terms of re-education of disabled soldiers because of the immediate need of help among these honored men. Later we shall turn what we have learned to do for these men into better provisions for making self-supporting our crippled and blinded children who are now in dependent institutions being made still more dependent by the very nature of the poor apology for vocational training which is given them. Now we have clearly before us the need for industrial education because the government is crying for workers. Later we shall see the need for industrial education because those who are to work in the industries need it.

PROMINENT MEN ARE EXPECTED TO ATTEND FUNERAL

Columbus, O. July 3.—Many persons prominent in church life are expected to attend the funeral this afternoon of the Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden, noted author and pastor emeritus of the First Congregational church, this city, who died Tuesday morning following a stroke of paralysis.

After lying in state at the church from 2 to 4 o'clock, services will be conducted there at 4:30 by the Rev. Irving Maurer, pastor, assisted by President King, of Oberlin College. Burial will be in Columbus.

The Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden, pastor of the First Congregational church of Columbus, O., for 32 years from 1882 to 1914, and since then pastor emeritus, was one of the most widely-known preachers and writers of his denomination in the United States. He strove both in the pulpit and in his books for great social reforms, and his success in influencing the spirit of the church was widely acknowledged.

Dr. Gladden was born February 11, 1836, at Pottsgrove, Pa. In his "Recollections" published in 1910, he tells that both his grandfathers were shoemakers and his father a country school teacher. He could read at family prayers before he was 3 years old and he memorized portions of an English grammar before he was 4 years old. His father died when he was very young, and his mother took him to her country home in New York state, where he worked on a farm, was printer's boy, went to school and finally he entered Williams college, taught, preached and at last, with no attendance at a theological school, was ordained and became pastor of a little country church. He was later pastor of small churches in Brooklyn, New York City and North Adams and Springfield, Mass., and for four years was connected with the editorial staff of the Independent. The First Congregational church in Columbus, of which he was pastor for the greater part of his life, was one of the most famous churches of the city.

His writings include not only a long list of books on Christian living and allied subjects, but many poems and several hymns, such as "The Discipline" which have taken their place among the permanent hymns of the church.

Bert Benning, negro, recently released from the Xenia work house, was again taken into custody in Springfield Tuesday and is held on the charge of contributing to the delinquency of minor children. Benning, who is a big fellow, was given employment by the city driving the city street flusher, following his release from the work house, because of his ability to work. After receiving one pay, Benning disappeared and was not heard from until he came into the limelight in police circles Tuesday.

Human Machinery. We have headaches and colds, not at all realizing our body is in need of some good, pure oxygen. Mechanics take much better care of their machinery than they do of their own bodies. They know that unless the machine is cleaned, oiled and rested occasionally it will not run properly. How often do they think of the importance of caring for their human machinery? They run it at the highest tension, feed it on stale air and improper food and then become surprised if it runs down.

THEATERS

Bijou. It is said that "Broadway breaks a millionaire every night," and to add to this it also breaks a million hearts, would not be out of place. Broadway was responsible for the DeSaulles domestic tragedy which was so much read a few months ago and it is on this famous case the new Fox picture "Woman and the Law" is based. The picture features Miriam Cooper. It comes to the Bijou theater Wednesday night and Thursday afternoon and night.

Orphium. "Broken Ties," is the name of the latest World Film release which comes to the Orphium Thursday matinee and night. The picture features June Elvidge, ontague Love and Arthur M. Ashley.

Pretty June Elvidge has a clever and interesting part in the new picture, which was written by Woodbridge Clapp and is one of the most charming stories she has interpreted for some time. As can be seen by her cast she is well supported.

THE WOMAN WHO CHANGED

By JANE PHELPS.

Helen Tells Her Husband She Saw The Supper Party

CHAPTER CXXIX.

When I told Mrs. Collins that George knew I had seen the supper party, she sneeringly returned:

"You are very clever."

I made no reply—simply nodded and left the table. But up in my room, I walked the floor wringing my hands and excitedly talking loudly to myself. I knew I had worried her—that I had had the best of the conversation from every point; but instead of being elated, I was horribly depressed. Must I always be subjected to such things? Should I always be fighting to prove my right to my husband to love? It wasn't a pleasant thought nor one I could think of with equanimity.

I guess I gave her something to think of, the cat! I said to myself, thinking of the first time I had heard her called "cat" and that it was Merton Gray who had applied the name to her. "I'll show her she can't get the best of me, even if I have to lie," but as I recalled my untruth, I flushed. I never had known George to tell even the tiniest lie. He would be discussed, when he knew (as he would have to) that I had stooped to tell the truth.

Mrs. Collins took your place when you left me, this noon," I told George when he came in early, as he said he would. "She saw me, last night, as your party in the grill broke up."

George is Amazed at Helen's Confession.

"She saw you—when?"

"When your party, of which she was one, started to leave the grill."

"But—where were you?"

"I was in the corridor. I couldn't sleep and had gone down to get a book."

"Why didn't you speak to me, if you were there when we came out? Were you spying on me?"

"I was getting a book," I parried. Then I told him: Mrs. Collins was very insulting. She said I owed her a vote of thanks because she had not told you. I said that I had told you myself, so I owed her nothing."

"You—"

"I told a lie George, and I shall tell as many more as are necessary to let people know I am not the abused, neglected wife they think I am—and that at times I am."

"What else did you say to her?"

"I can't recall all that passed, but I remember she said you told her you had not invited me to join the party. Of course that gave her all the liberty she needed."

"Yes, I said I would not disturb you, as you had not been well."

"She also asked me why I was not jealous, implying of course that I had reason to be."

"What reply did you make to that? This is most interesting." The sneer on my husband's lips made me feel like crying, but I stubbornly resisted. I had started, at last, to show my independence. I would not weaken.

"Why, when she said I was very sure of you, calling 'George' as usual, altho I never speak of you to her as 'Mr. Howard,' I said: I was sure of you—that had you cared for any of the Moreland women or girls, you would have asked them to marry you instead of me, as you had known them all for years before you met me."

"Was that quite all you said?"

"No, when she sneered at me, I told her that you were, most likely, the same as other men in your taste for a wife younger than yourself. That is all, I think. But I wanted you to know exactly what was said, as I feel sure she will tell you her version of the conversation. She was very angry, altho she tried to hide it."

An Unexpected Rejoinder

I turned quietly away and commenced to lay out my clothes for dinner. After my excitement had abated, I had spent the afternoon trying to plan my future conduct toward George, and towards his world. I would be dignified and calm; I would not be sat upon; and I would, in all things try to become a woman of poise and character—a woman of the world.

"By Jove! that must have taken Julia's breath away."

I could scarcely believe my ears. I had expected fault-finding—perhaps unpleasantness—to result from my confession, particularly as he had received it so sneeringly. And this was his only comment! Was there ever so strange a man?

"I think it did," I replied, going on with what I was doing.

"What queer creatures women are," he soliloquized. Then, to me: "I don't see why women cannot be friends the same as men, but evidently they cannot."

I made no reply, and the matter was not referred to again by either of us, altho I could not put it from my mind for days.

TWO AVIATORS AT WRIGHT FIELD INJURED IN FALL

Two flyers from Wright field were injured, one probably fatally, late Tuesday afternoon when their machine fell several hundred feet and landed in a field near Medway, half way between Dayton and Springfield on the Ohio Electric traction line. Cadet Hargrave suffered numerous injuries and may not live. Lieutenant Bradley was less seriously hurt. Both are in the hospital at the field.

Cadet Hargrave suffered a broken leg, fractured jaw and internal injuries and lost five teeth in the fall. He was pinned under the machine when aid reached him. He had been strapped in.

Lieutenant Bradley received several cuts and bruises but his condition was said last night not to be critical. He was thrown clear of the wreckage when the machine struck.

Reports from Medway were that the aviators had been doing fancy flying over the village and it was the belief of spectators that the men lost control of the machine.

THE DRIVE THAT FAILED.

The great Austrian drive against Italy turns out to be the most cheering thing that has happened to the Allies this year.

As a drive it is a joke. It may almost be said to have stopped before it started. The Italians, with a little help from the British and French, checked the initial blows in almost every sector of the great battle front, and in many cases promptly threw back the assaults with an actual loss of territory. In the few places where the enemy succeeded in advancing at all, he was quickly "contained" before he had got far enough to do any harm.

It is something quite new in the annals of trench warfare. By all precedent, the Austrians should have plunged ahead in their first rush, as the Germans did in France, and as the British and French have done whenever they launched an offensive. It is an acknowledged fact of the new war strategy that it takes several days to bring a powerful thrust to a halt, before the counter-offensive can begin. And here we find the counter-offensive starting almost simultaneously with the offensive itself.

Any war critics can see in this development the pleasing proof that Austria-Hungary today, exerting its utmost effort, is inferior to Italy in military strength and public morale. War-paralysis has come upon the autocratic empire of Kaiser Karl, while the free, youthful, democratic monarchy of Italy is at the zenith of its power.

For a little while last Fall, Italy weakened and wavered. She has now bravely atoned for that lapse. She is regenerated, a worthy member of the great brotherhood, a comrade, of whom Britain, France and America may well be proud.

The tide has turned. The German wave has begun to recede. Austrian military power is breaking up in the cross-currents of political revolt. The Germans on the western front, sense the inevitable, and fight with less spirit.

It is "thus far and no farther" for the Central Powers. Henceforth the Allies have them on the run. To Italy goes the credit of starting them down the toboggan slide.

PUT AN END TO BOOZE.

To every proposed legislative policy the test should be applied: Will it help win the war?

Under the circumstances the adoption of prohibition for the period of the war would be as effective a war measure as this government could take.

The cessation of brewing would save approximately 40 million bushels of grain a year for food purposes. This amount saved in the last year would have been of great importance. At a time when every household is called on to save food it seems absurd to permit the use of grain for beer. There could be no greater absurdity than to tell a man who eats in a public restaurant that he cannot eat more than two small rolls at a meal, but that he can drink as much beer as he likes.

Beer making certainly cannot be called an essential industry. Yet we permit an army of able bodied men to engage in it. We permit it to consume millions of tons of coal at a time when war industries can hardly get enough, and when schools are obliged to close for lack of fuel. We permit the industry to consume ice when private households are going on half rations. We permit it to use railroad facilities that ought to be devoted to useful work.

Is it too much a sacrifice to ask men to go without their beer?

Why is it more of a sacrifice to go without beer than to go without wheat bread or sugar? We are all of us called on to make sacrifices, even if we do not make the great sacrifice of going to fight or sending our sons. What a trivial sacrifice to go without beer!

Ought we to permit the business to continue in order not to throw men out of work?

This is the best time in history to close an undesirable industry. The demand for labor cannot nearly be met. The men who are now working in breweries and saloons would never find a more favorable occasion to be absorbed into other industries. They could make the transition now with the least possible inconvenience and hardship.

The whole booze business is not merely nonessential. It is destructive. It weakens the national efficiency. It is a bad influence in the community. It is the basis of vicious politics. It has brought distress and ruin to a multitude of victims.

What reasons can offset these? As a war emergency measure Congress is wholly justified in putting an end to booze.—Kansas City Star.

MISS JACKSON IS HONOR GUEST AT DELIGHTFUL EVENT

Miss Ruth Jackson, whose marriage to the Rev. Henry Rankin of Tarkio, Mo., will take place Friday afternoon, was honor guest at a lawn picnic and miscellaneous shower which was given by the Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First United Presbyterian church at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Bell on Columbus street, Tuesday evening.

The lovely lawn at the Bell home is an attractive spot for such an affair, and the thirty young women enjoyed the occasion very much. The bride elect, who is one of the favorite members of the society, was "show-ered" with many pretty gifts, which will help to remind her frequently of her Xenia friends when she is in off Egypt.

Later in the evening the society held its regular program, and Miss Edna Griffin, of Cincinnati, formerly missionary in Egypt, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Herman Eavey, gave a little talk regarding mission work.

PENNSY RESTAURANT IS TO BE RE-OPENED

Mr. and Mrs. John Mendenhall, who have been conducting the Berkley Hotel on south Detroit street for several years, have accepted the management of the Pennsylvania depot hotel and restaurant, which has been prepared for re-opening.

The hotel and restaurant, which was formerly a successful business for the railroad has not been in operation for many years. The restaurant room on the ground floor has been cleaned and newly equipped with modern utensils and the hotel rooms on the second floor have been cleaned and prepared for use. There will be about ten or twelve rooms available.

Mr. and Mrs. Mendenhall are hoping to get the new business started as soon as possible and may have it in operation the first of next week. Both regular meals and short orders will be served at the restaurant. Mr. and Mrs. Mendenhall and family will remove from the Berkley Hotel to the depot and will discontinue operation of the up-town hostelry.

ALL IS QUIET IN THE PRINTING OFFICE

Ho-hum! Alack-a-day! The slapping of ink, the pounding of type-bars, the slashing of the blue pencil, the rattling of the linotype, the hammering of the press, the cries of the carrier kids, the ordinary commotion of publication! The ever-turning wheels of progress stop in their flight, the type-bar jams, the blue pencil ceases to blue, the ink loses its restlessness, the linotype is unnaturally silent, the press refuses to roar, the kids are conspicuous by their absence!

The scribe's cryptic scribbling is squelched! The printer's patient patience ceases to perform! The linotype's languid lapping up metal is lacking! The press's printing for the particular public is past! Even a newspaper office can be patriotically lazy and lay off a day.

GREENE CO. NEED NOT SEND ANY MEN IN THE JULY CALL

Greene County will not have to send any selectives to make up the July 22 call.

State draft headquarters sent out announcement of quotas of all counties Wednesday to the local draft boards, and according to these calls, Greene County will not have to furnish any men in the July call.

It is said the reason for this is that Greene County is already far ahead of its quota and that, excepting for the reclassified registrants who have just been transferred to Class 1, there are no Class 1 men here.

Beneficial Shorebirds.

All the shorebirds are strikingly beneficial in their food habits. The slaughter of these game birds deprives the farmer of valuable allies against some of the worst crop pests. Such game birds as quail, grouse and pheasant take less insect food than the shorebirds, yet all of them do a certain amount of good. Even hawks and owls have a bad name which for the most part is undeserved, it is said, and indiscriminate persecution of these birds is a serious mistake.

For several weeks past Sayre & Hemphill have done a big business in selling Hokara, the skin healer that has won so many friends in Xenia. It has been found to heal not only all minor skin troubles, such as pimples, blackheads, herpes, acne, scaly scalp, complexion blemishes, itching feet, piles, etc., but also the worst sores, ulcers, or even chronic eczema and salt rheum. There is yet to be found any form of wound or disease affecting the skin or mucous membrane that Hokara does not help, and its action is so quick that those who try it are simply delighted with it right from the start.

In spite of its unusual curative powers, the price is trifling. To convince every one of its merits, Sayre & Hemphill will sell a liberal sized jar for 35c. And remember that if you do not think it does what it claims, you can get your money back. You certainly can afford to try it on this plan.

All Over Town People Are Talking About the New Brunswick

THE new Brunswick Method of Reproduction has met with instant acclaim. And music lovers predict for The Brunswick complete leadership.

Never before have people known such an advanced type of phonograph. It lacks all the crudities of yesterday. Tone is more natural than ever before. The most difficult selections, such as piano and orchestra, are played with absolute fidelity.

The Brunswick Method of Reproduction includes The Ultona. Now all records can be played in the exact way each requires. A turn of the hand and the proper needle and diaphragm are presented to each type of record.

Heretofore one-record instruments have prevailed. Some require attachments. None of the leading phonographs can offer the advantages of The Ultona.

Your ideas of phonographic values are bound to change now. You cannot be satisfied with yesterday's standards. Times have changed.

Come in today and hear the wonderful Brunswick which is made by The Brunswick-Balke-Clender Co. See if you do not agree that it is the most perfect.

More Binder Twine Needed

In past years, it has been the custom of The Hooven & Allison Company to discontinue the manufacture of binder twine during August and early fall months. Conditions are different this year. American manufacturers are called upon to furnish practically the entire world's supply of binder twine. The government has asked this company to operate its plant continuously and at their highest capacity. Under these circumstances none of the mills will be closed this season. After its boys, binder twine is Xenia's largest and most important contribution towards winning the war. Many more workers are needed. Any girl over 16 and any boy over 15 can help.

A Glorious Fourth

By YOUR UNCLE DOCK.

For some unaccountable reason, neglect or indifference, the "Glorious Fourth" has been allowed to go by default this year, by common consent. Never in the history of our American Independence has the necessity and importance, of a true, patriotic joyful, safe and sane, observance of our national independence day been so absolutely paramount as at the present time. The Fourth of July commemorates the declaration of our independence and the privileges "of Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness." This is the sum and substance of that true Democracy that we are engaged in a bloody war to defend, and are endeavoring by the force of arms to extend to all peoples of the world; and God grant that we may be successful.

Before all nations will accept our Democracy, they must be shown, must know in what it consists. In order that it may not be a stretch in their nostrils, we must exemplify it in our lives and practice it in our daily dealings. For more than a year we have shown our independence and loyalty, by voluntarily and magnanimously restricting, and conserving our food supplies at the request—not commands—of our authorities. This was patriotism mixed with expediency and self protection. We have "Gone over the top," subscribing for Liberty bonds and thrift stamps, more patriotism coupled with a desire for a good investment, with freedom from annoying taxes, and a chance to become a bondholder. These things do not spell democracy. Behold the Huns do likewise.

Democracy does not consist in exorbitant profits for the manufacturer or jobber, or for exorbitant wages for the laborer. It does not mean cornering goods to raise profits or holding up a train with a revolver or a strike.

Democracy means our Fourth of July Declaration of Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. And we pray you, what could be more appropriate and beneficial, than to observe this one day, now in the midst of an abundant harvest and great general prosperity a grand holiday free from all financial persuasions and personal gains, and turn our attention to the pursuit of happiness. Let us relax and loosen up. And as true happiness can only be found in doing good to others, let us see how many good deeds we can do for others for nothing. It is too late now but we should have had a race between an American aeroplane equipped with a liberty motor and the American Eagle, but as that is impossible, let us remember that a good deed makes less noise but goes higher in the heavens than a sky-rocket that a kind word can bring more light and cheer than a roman candle.

Thursday, will be a splendid day to give a poor boy or girl a good meal, a clean garment, a dime for a ticket to the picture show. A good opportunity to give some poor "shut in" a ride to the country in your auto, or Ford. A good day to give a farmer with short help, a lift in his wheat and hay harvest for only a dinner of chicken and sweet cream. Let's help hoe the war gardens, and help do house work, and bring some good cheer to the sick, and for a brief spell relieve the over-taxed nurse, and show our love for our country by manifesting our love for our fellowman, and prove beyond a doubt that true democracy is not a myth but a blessed reality. Remember the wives and mothers over whom the great war-cloud looms darkest and gloomiest by giving them a glimpse of the silver lining. May the Fourth of July this year be the best and most enjoyable of all fourths, on account of something that we have done that was really worth while—lest we forget—lest we forget.

SPRINGFIELD LAD AMONG THE KILLED

Antonio Bailey, colored trumpeter in Co. A, of the 372nd Infantry, whose home is in Springfield, has been killed in action, official word having been received by his wife in Springfield Tuesday afternoon after she had unofficially learned the news through letters printed in a Springfield paper.

Bailey who was but 20 years of age, died June 6 of wounds received in action. He is a cousin of Private Earl Carrol of this city, who is in the same regiment.

Not only the design but the colors of the rugs woven in the Orient are full of significance. They represent national or individual traditions, and stand for virtues, vices and social importance.

REV. JOHN KYLE, D. D., DIES IN THE EAST

Judge Charles H. Kyle received a telegram yesterday morning announcing the death of his brother, the Rev. John M. Kyle, D. D., of Lowell, Mass. Judge Kyle was at Mineral Springs, in Adams county of this state, when the message reached him. He came to Xenia in the afternoon and took the 6:30 train for Boston.

Dr. Kyle was for twenty-five years a missionary to Brazil and was very successful in his work there. His greatest service in that field was the establishment of a theological seminary for the training of a native ministry, and the translation of the Bible into the Portuguese language for the use of the people. He was finally obliged to return to the home field, owing to a severe illness. Having recovered in some good measure his strength he was very desirous to go back to Brazil, but his physicians feared a return of the disease which had disabled him; but the missionary spirit was strong, and he gave himself to work among the Portuguese immigrants in Lowell and vicinity. In this work he accomplished much to the glory of his Lord.

Dr. Kyle was twice married, his first wife having died several years ago. His daughter, Jessie, who spent several years in Xenia at the home of Judge Kyle, survives her parents. The burial will take place on Friday afternoon at Lowell.

FORMER XENIA WOMAN IS DEAD

Mrs. Harvey Bickett, former Xenian, sister-in-law of Miss Ella Bickett and of the late Mrs. T. B. Clark, of this city, died at her home in Superior, Neb., last Thursday. Burial was made in Odell, Neb., her girlhood home.

Mrs. Bickett moved from this city about 15 years. She had been suffering for some time from cancer. Mr. Bickett came to this city a few weeks ago at the time of the illness and death of Mrs. Clark and when he returned home his wife was seriously ill. Besides her husband, Mrs. Bickett leaves three children, Miss Eliza of Omaha, Neb., Miss Emelyn and Harvey, Jr., at home.

GALLOWAY & CHERRY

11 E. MAIN ST.

XENIA, OHIO

THE river had not been so low in years as it was the summer that Jim Pangburn decided to spend his vacation in his motor boat. It made work easy for the fishermen, for they could wade into the clam beds, although they did so to the permanent injury of the beds, the inexperienced ones tramping the life out of the spawn.

It was a new world to Pangburn, and when he found Marvin Dwight, grizzled and browned by the sun and wind of the river, he was glad to accept Dwight's hospitable offer to make his island his home and share the clammer's life for a while.

One morning, about a week after his arrival, he overslept and when he came out found that Dwight had disappeared. He took a book from the shelves and strolled down to the bay lake that dotted the center of the island. But the drone of bees in the linden trees and his own lassitude made his head nod drowsily and the book dropped from his lax fingers.

Several hours later he roused himself with a start and sprang up conscious of a ravenous hunger, for the fresh river air had restored the appetite that late hours and overwork had taken from him. When he went back to the cottage, Dwight met him.

"Do you know the lotus lilies are out?" he called. "You never saw such a sight! Can you imagine it, thirty or forty acres of nothing but yellow lotus lilies?"

Pangburn could imagine it and his face lighted expectantly. "Where are they?" he demanded.

"You won't find them in many places in the old U.S., but over in Deadman's Slough they are in perfection. I'd take you there myself but I'm not up to the mark today. Wait, I'll tell Theo."

There were always visitors on the island, men, young and old, who loafed on the benches along the bank and talked of clam fishing. Dwight was a favorite with them and Pangburn had no doubt that Theo, whoever he might be, would be glad to grant Dwight's request. He went toward the house to get his coat and something to eat and then started back in surprise, for a young girl stood on the threshold, a most attractive young girl, slim and straight, and with a direct gaze out of her big grey eyes that was almost boyish. She glanced at Pangburn before she spoke to Dwight in a low, clear voice, that for some reason reminded Pangburn of the river.

"What is it, daddy?"

Dwight put his arm around her. "You didn't know I had such a big girl, did you, Mr. Pangburn? This is my daughter, Theodora. She has been at the normal school learning to be a teacher. I didn't expect her home for another month, but she couldn't stand a separation from her old dad any longer and ran away from her friends.

The Faith of a Woman

By Frances R. Sterrett

Theo, will you pilot Mr. Pangburn to the lotus lily fields?"

"It would be mighty good of you, Miss Dwight," Pangburn told her earnestly.

"I'll be glad to go, to show you the way and see them myself, but first we must have dinner. Aunt Jane has it ready. Does the river give you an appetite, Mr. Pangburn? It makes me hollow to my heels."

Immediately after dinner they left in the motor boat for Deadman's Slough. As far as the eye could see, the great blossoms were lifting their velvety petals on long, slender stems as though trying to get as far as possible from the slime and mud that had reared them. The slough ran back between high banks, and here and there stood a clump of gnarled old willows.

"They should be palms," muttered Pangburn to himself.

Theo's eyes sparkled and a little color crept into her cheeks. "I used to like to row in here before I went to the Normal," she confessed, "and imagine I was Cleopatra."

"And Marc Antony?" he questioned lightly. "Where was Marc?"

She tilted her nose disdainfully. "It would have been much better for Cleopatra if she had never met Marc Antony," she told him somewhat primly. They did not talk much as they loitered among the lotus blossoms, but as Pangburn took the wheel at last he felt that he had known her always.

There was a rare sympathy, a magnetism about the girl that made her seem like an old friend, and he gazed at her with frank pleasure as the boat darted swiftly back to the island. Before they reached the dock an unfamiliar voice came to Pangburn, and as he drew nearer he could see a man sitting beside Dwight.

"Is it Marc Antony?" he asked mischievously.

She flushed angrily and tossed her head. "It must be Barney Nelson, one of the clambers, a boy I have known ever since we came to the island."

After that it seemed to Pangburn that Barney was always about. He wooed Theo with an open fierceness that shocked and repelled her and she avoided him whenever she could. She was seldom to be seen about the house, and Pangburn often found her near the lake where they spent hours together, reading or talking. Sometimes they could hear Barney's strident voice and Theo would shiver and press her hands together.

"I'm—I'm afraid of Barney Nelson! He seems so strong and cruel," she panted one day when they heard him, and she drew nearer to Pangburn. He took her hand and said: "Don't be afraid. I'll look after you."

That evening she asked Pangburn the next morning and took a place in the scow that Dwight poled with measured strokes. It was afternoon before the "bars" were lowered. They came up empty several times and then the shell apart. When he saw just inside the edge a sphere, perfect in form and color, he almost dropped it.

Dwight turned on him instantly, the shell clutched tightly in his fingers.

"For just a second she let him see her face."

If he would go with her father the next day. "Father frightens me," she explained, fighting the self-consciousness that made her feel timid with her guest. "He is restless and irritable, as if one of his heart attacks might be coming on. I can't persuade him to stay at home and I wish you would go with him."

To their surprise Dwight made no objection when Pangburn joined him hooks held a dozen shells that told Dwight he had found a clam bed. He took out his knife and began to open a few of the shells. There was nothing in the first two and he tossed them to the end of the boat. The third clam produced a slug. Pangburn became excited and forgot that he was hot and tired. He took one of the clams to see what it contained, severing the muscles carefully and wrenching the

His eyes were like coals and his face and figure transformed with suspicious fury. Then with a strange, strangled gasp he swayed and dropped heavily to the bottom of the boat. The scow careened wildly and Pangburn tried to raise Dwight so that it would right itself. He did not hear the splash of oars nor sense the presence of anyone until Barney Nelson thrust his head over his shoulder.

Together they raised the unconscious man. Barney took the shell from the rigid fingers, and when he saw the pearl that still clung to it he looked at Pangburn again.

"I understand," he said slowly. Pangburn was still too anxious to notice that Barney put the pearl in his own pocket.

"If the doctor would only come," moaned Theo, staring down the river. "Why didn't you let me go?" Barney's voice was in her ear. "That Pangburn won't be back!"

She turned to him like a flash. "What do you mean?" she cried.

He laughed coarsely. "When a man tries to kill a fellow he doesn't waste time going for a doctor for him, but looks after his own safety."

"Kill a man!" That was all she heard and she faced him with white face and blazing eyes. "What makes you think Mr. Pangburn tried to kill a man?"

"This!" On Barney's palm lay a pearl, such a pearl as is seldom taken from the river, and the sight of it brought the clambers near with exclamations of wonder and envy. "Your father and Mr. Pangburn were fighting over this pearl when I rowed up to them this afternoon just in time to keep Mr. Pangburn from pitching your father into the river. I guess he thought he could come back here with some story about an accident and you would be fool enough to believe him. But I blocked his little game and I got the pearl."

There was an ominous silence. The girl was stunned by the horrible picture that Barney had painted. The throbbing of a motor down the river broke the silence.

"There's the doc," she heard one of the men mutter, and she forced herself to turn.

Straight to the landing came the boat, Pangburn at the wheel, his sleeves rolled up to the shoulder, his shirt torn.

"Don't forget," whispered Barney, "that man at the wheel tried to kill your father!"

Dr. Wood came swiftly up from the landing and went into the house. Pangburn stepped out of the boat wearily. He was dead tired and consumed with a fierce anxiety for Theo.

When he saw her his face brightened and he went directly toward her. Barney stepped between them and, at his signal, the clambers gathered about to cut off any chance of escape. Theo understood their position, and knew the meaning of their threatening faces. If Pangburn could not explain to their satisfaction, they would show no mercy, and what explanation could he make that would prove Barney wrong? If her father could only tell them of his innocence! She sent an agonized glance around the group. There was Ole Thronson. He had been her friend since childhood. He would believe her if she could but speak.

Pangburn looked at Barney in surprise as the latter thrust himself in front of Theo with a muttered exclamation: "You thief! You murderer!"

The words roused Theo. The muscles of her throat were hard and stiff as iron. She could not even whisper, but she could act. She straightened herself proudly, and walking swiftly by Barney kissed Pangburn full on the mouth. It was her confession of faith, of belief in his innocence, and so Ole Thronson, the old river man, read it. "We will just wait," he said calmly, "until the doctor tells us what is the matter with Dwight."

"Dwight's all right," Dr. Wood told them. "He will get well if he isn't excited. Mr. Dwight, as many of you know, is subject to heart attacks, and one of them overcame him in the excitement of finding a valuable pearl."

"These men thought that Mr. Pangburn—it was Theo's voice again and it broke pitifully—"tried to kill father for the pearl."

"Pooh! Nonsense! They aren't such fools." The doctor's voice was full of cold contempt. "There isn't a sign to prove it. You know better, Nelson," he turned to Barney. "You have seen Mr. Dwight in one of these attacks before. Don't let me hear of a whisper of such a thing from any of you, or I'll be Mr. Pangburn's witness in a suit for slander. I must go, my dear"—he patted Theo's shoulder. "Good-night. Your father is doing well. Come, Pangburn." Still keeping that vise-like grip held on Pangburn's arm, he never loosened his grasp until the boat was out on the river.

When Pangburn came back, the dock was deserted. A light burned in the cottage, in the room where the sick man slept, but there was no other sign of life until the boat neared the landing, when a shadow rose hurriedly from the bench and stood for a moment poised in the moonlight. He called, and the figure faltered as it ashamed to go and yet too shy to stay.

He took her cold hands in his and stood looking down at her drooping head with a wonderfully tender expression, and his voice was not quite steady as he said:

"How can I thank you for your beautiful faith and trust? This has been the proudest night in all my life. Oh, my dear! my dear! I can't put it in words, but if a heart full of love and a life of devotion can show my appreciation, they are yours. I have loved you ever since that day in the lotus fields."

For just a second she let him see her face, and then it was dropped again, this time on his breast as his arm held her tight.

Sam Davis, showman, who was sent to Taylor by the local board in the last increment, has no relatives—he does not know the supreme joy of a letter received from a doting mother, an admiring sister, a proud brother or a loving sweetheart. Davis was called while on a road trip with his show and in order not to miss the earliest train to get here he came home without a coat. One was supplied him here and today the donor, a member of the local board, received a letter from him, asking that he write.

"I have only received one letter since I have been here," said the letter as he begged that his benefactor write to him. A little, just a little, publicity was made of the letter and the result is that Sam Davis's quota of mail will not only be materially increased but he will also have some "smokes," another longing for solace. Contributions voluntarily offered by readers of the letter, paid for a carton of Camel's which have been forwarded to the soldier. If you have a bit of cheer to pass around or if your supply of cigarettes is more than you can use send them along to Sam Davis, Battery B, 325th Field Artillery, West Point, Ky., and you will feel the joy of having done a kind deed.

A Woman Gives Out Important Secrets

Madame Langford, well known beauty specialist, in a recent interview told the secrets of her success in improving the complexion. She says: The average man has a better complexion than woman of same age—men use lots of soap and water in shaving and the massaging necessary prevents wrinkles, etc. Women are too apt to depend on a casual washing with cold water, then try to cover up defects with powder and rouge and this makes the complexion worse. She must give the skin careful attention at night—sleeping with powder, dust and grime of the day on the face will soon coarsen the finest skin and cause various complexion troubles. Use a soft wash cloth, rubbed on Velvetina Complexion Soap and warm water, and after cleansing—the soft, oily Velvetina Massage, using an upward and outward movement with the finger tips, working out impurities from the pores of the skin. This treatment soon produces marvelous results. Then in the morning, apply Velvetina Vanishing Cream and Velvetina Face Powder to protect the delicate surface of the skin from the sun and wind and this gives the whole secret of a perfect complexion for women. —Adv.

BIBLE CONFERENCE OPENS AUGUST 10TH

Bible conference makes no increase in price of tickets. The same tent, from the same firm, to stand on the same ground, costs considerably more this year than last. Postage, railroad rates, and everything else that enters into the cost of the conference has perceptibly increased, but when the Collector of Internal Revenue wrote that the conference did not come under the law requiring a war tax; that it comes under the class of "Educational and Religious" gatherings; not "Amusements and Entertainments" the management at once decided that there would be no advance in price of tickets. Season tickets are $1.50. Tickets, in the hands of the guarantors, who pledged for them last year can be had while they last at $1.00 each. Dr. A. W. Jamison can put you in touch with the guarantors, if you are not already posted. The conference begins Saturday evening, August 10th and closes Sabbath evening, August 18th.

RASH COVERED BABY'S BODY

Large Water Blisters Formed. Cried Night and Day. Could Not Have Clothes On.

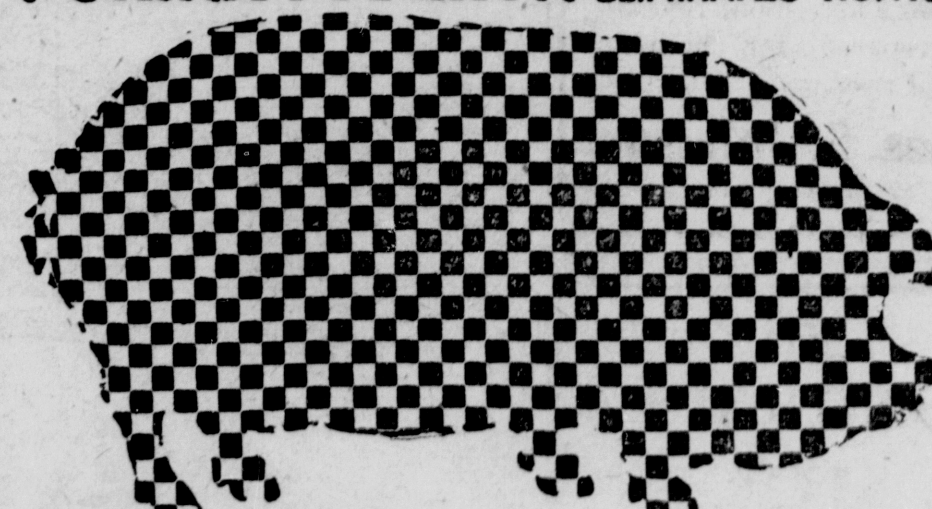

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"Baby was only six weeks old when she broke out in a rash. It was in blotches like a burn and her whole body except her back, arms, and from her knees down was completely covered. Then large water blisters formed and I could not have any clothes on her. She cried night and day, and I had to carry her on a pillow."

"We had her treated, but she was given up. Then we used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and in two weeks she was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Edna Burt, Fenton, Mich., August 31, 1917.

The majority of skin and scalp troubles might be prevented by using Cuticura Soap exclusively for all toilet purposes. On the slightest sign of redness, roughness, pimples or dandruff, apply a little Cuticura Ointment. Sample Each Free by Mail. Address postcard: "Cuticura, Dept. B, Boston." Sold everywhere. Soap 25c. Ointment 25c and 50c.

PURINA PIG CHOW ELIMINATES RUNTS

Quick Gains and Larger Hogs

PURINA PIG CHOW is made from cane molasses, ground corn, tankage (60% protein), alfalfa, salt and humus; scientifically proportioned to provide the proper balance for growth, for fattening and for regulation—the three big factors necessary in successful pig raising and hog fattening.

FOR FATTENING

When PURINA PIG CHOW is fed as a half ration with corn, middlings or other feeds, it produces from 25% to 40% more live hog than is obtained with the same pounds of other feeds. Numerous tests have proved that PURINA PIG CHOW will produce 100 pounds of live hog at a feed cost of from $3.00 to $6.00 less than other rations. PURINA PIG CHOW will shorten the fattening period 20 to 30 days. It provides the proper proteins and minerals lacking in corn, middlings, etc.

Try PURINA PIG CHOW—it will make money for you. A new shipment just received.

LETTERS FROM OUR SOLDIERS

Letters for this column from Greene county's soldiers are solicited. No matter whether the letter is from a soldier in the training camp or from the battle trenches it is of interest, not only to his close friends but to the general public. Therefore if you receive a letter from a soldier and it contains interesting news pass it along to the newspaper and we will publish it so all his friends may enjoy it. Soldiers are also invited to write directly to the newspaper.

Elwood H. Swan, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Swan of East Third street, has written the following interesting letter from Camp Crane, at Allentown, Pennsylvania, where he is in the medical corps:

"Dearest Mother:—You will excuse
this writing as I am writing en route and it is no easy thing to do.

"Left Ft. Thomas this evening and just now passed through Maysville, Ky. The town was down to meet us and sure gave us a nice reception;
passed out cigarettes and magazines and let me tell you I got my share.

"It rained all day today and we did not get started until 7:30 a. m. It is now about ten o'clock. Will write more in the morning. Am sure enjoying it.

"Passed by Portsmouth at 12 o'clock. It is quite a city. Passed over into Virginia at 1:30. Nobody got any sleep last night, the boys had such a good time and raised particular in I feel just as good today as though I had a good night's sleep. Have passed about 15 coal mines and been through most a million tunnels. I have no fear for poison gas after going through them. Was through several this morning that were more than a mile long.

"This certainly is a wonderful country. The most beautiful I ever saw.
Am now passing through the Blue Ridge Mountains, of which the poets rave; words cannot describe their beauty. Will get two hours off at Washington, D. C., this afternoon for sight seeing.

"Tell Louis I had canned cornbeef and canned tomatoes cooked together with two slices of dry bread. It sure was fine though, and tasted as good as anything I ever ate.

"Passed through White Sulphur Springs this afternoon; it is a noted watering place and patronized by M.
Adoo and other celebrities. Also passed through Staunton, Virginia. It is the place where President Wilson was born. It also has a famous University.

We were due in Washington at 3:30 and it is now 5:05 and about 125 miles from Washington. Expect to get there about 9 p. m. Don't know what we will get much of a stop over or not now.

"The people up through here sure do believe in robbing you. Some one at every station selling sandwiches at 15 and 25 cents per but have not been that hungry yet. We are just about out of the mountains now and traveling through some pretty fair country.

"Passed the Arlington wireless station this side of Washington. It is an immense affair with three large towers probably 150 feet high. Also saw the Washington monument from the train. After crossing the Potomac river we entered a tunnel and came out at the depot, but were only allowed a few minutes and didn't get to leave the station.

"After leaving Washington passed Laurel, a famous race track, then ran into Baltimore or rather under it as we entered a subway in the suburbs at one end of the city and came out at the other end in the suburbs. Passed Havre De Grace, another famous race track next. Reached Philadelphia at 12 but I was fast asleep.

"Arrived at Allentown at 4:30, after being on the train 36 hours, marched one and one-half miles to camp and then—sweet dreams.

"Later. Well, am out at camp. It is just on the outskirts of Allentown.
Allentown is a pretty city, fine residences, nice streets, etc. The camp is modern, camp and all of the buildings, barracks etc., are of recent construction. Well must close and clean up.

With love to all, Elwood." His address is "Elwood H. Swan, Bldg. 19, Casual, Camp Crane, Allentown, Pa."

Gotham.

The original Gotham was an old parish and village in Nottinghamshire, England, the inhabitants of which are reputed to have shown their wisdom by playing the fool in order to dissuade King John from passing through their town, and thus save them the expense of maintaining and entertaining him. The city of New York was first called Gotham by Washington Irving ("Salmagundi," 1807), in allusion to the pretensions to wisdom of its inhabitants.

FEEBLE AGED WOMAN

75 Years Old, Weakened by Pneumonia—Vinol Restored Strength.
Winchester, Va.—"I am a farmer's wife, 75 years of age, and pneumonia left me in a weak, run-down condition, so I could hardly keep about and do my work. A neighbor brought me Vinol and it has built up my strength so fast that I think it is the best medicine I have ever taken."

There is no secret about Vinol—it owes its success to beef and cod liver peptides, iron and manganese pep-tonates and glycerophosphates, the oldest and most famous body-building and strength creating tonics. Sayre

KAISER CAIN I.

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL.

"To do this gives my soul a pain," Quoth, on a time, a Mr. Cain.
"I wish to be a man of peace,
I want to see all quarrels cease,
But Kultur and my destiny
Point out my way unerringly;
My brother Abel is a man
Who cannot see the things I can.
He won't believe that only Might
Can ever make an action right,
So here is where and now is when I show what Might can do for men!"

The while he spake this primal Hun
With skillful motions had begun
To fashion from a tree a stick
Six cubits long and two feet thick,
Which being finished, loud he cried,
"Forward with God! And woe betide
The man or woman in the path
Of Cain and Kultur, Might and wrath!"
He found his brother mowing hay,
Killed him, and grandly marched away,
proclaiming, "God will further aid!
Men, look at me and be afraid!"

Curious Wooden Clock.

Seattle, Wash., boasts a curious wooden clock, three and a half feet in diameter, with a minute hand over four feet long. The case is not guaranteed, but it is supposed to be over 225 years old and is expected to last for some years to come. The works are placed in a section of Douglas fir log, one end of which is ornamented with the face numerals.

"A Safe Place to Trade"

LARGE NUMBER OF EX-PUPILS GATHER FOR THE ANNUAL REUNION

Although war has taken many from the ranks of younger ex pupils of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, George A. Stulz, of Dayton, president of the A. X. P. says that the first day's registrations, indicate that the number in attendance for the second and last days of the gathering will reach the usual number of 300 or 350.

One hundred and seventy-five had registered up to Tuesday evening. Tuesday was devoted to informal reunions among the former residents of the big institution, who were greeted cordially by President Stulz and other officers of the A. X. P. and by Superintendent and Mrs. J. P. Elton of the home.

Visiting their old matrons and the cottages that were their childhood homes, strolling about the grounds and among the buildings of the big institution where the state of Ohio takes care of the children of the nation's defenders, and chatting about the tables in the big dining room, where morning, noon and night the whistle summoned them to their meals for so many years, the reunion visitors are renewing their childhood.

There is very little formality about the reunions of the ex-pupils.

"Hello Bob." "Hello Mary." My goodness, you're looking as young as you did ten years ago."

"Well if there isn't little Nellie Smith from No 1 I haven't seen her for fifteen years and she hasn't changed much either."

"These and similar expressions are heard everywhere about the Home, reunion days."

The only touch of formality is the annual banquet and even this isn't fraught with too much dignity.

One of the Home's most honored graduates who is expected here to be toastmaster at the banquet Wednesday night is Charles S. Hart of New York, who has the commission of captain but doesn't use it. He is director of film distribution for the Bureau of Public Information, headquarters in New York, and was formerly advertising manager of the Hearst magazine. With him will come from New York, Carl Byrre, chairman of the Associate Committee on Public Information. Mr. Byrre will speak at the banquet. Another prominent graduate who is on the Wednesday night's program is William H. Johnson, manager of the International Feature Service.

Sergeant L. Shannon Cormick, a veteran of the Canadian service, Karl T. Webber, an ex pupil, former prosecuting attorney of Franklin county, and now candidate for Congress from the capital district, and Mrs. Samuel A. Dickson of Dayton, one of the prominent women graduates of the Home, will be other speakers.

It was hoped to have Governor Cox at the banquet, but President Stulz says that owing to his recent bereavement in the death of his infant son, and pressing duties, he will not be here. Byron C. Clendenning of the Public Utilities Commission will represent him.

MOTORAIDS

There is little question but that the best location for the gasoline tank is at the rear of the car. The best proof of this is that every high grade car, almost without exception, and many of the lower priced cars, carry the gasoline tank in that position.

There are numerous advantages coincident to carrying the gasoline tank at the rear. It is, thereby, possible to have a tank of much greater capacity than if located elsewhere, which is no mean advantage, especially when touring.

It removes the supply of gasoline from immediate proximity to the occupants of the car. It makes for a more even distribution of weight and gives the car better traction. It can be filled with fuel without distributing the passengers. It gives a finishing touch to the appearance of the car, the lack of which detracts much from its general aspect.

LIBRARY NOTES

Face to Face With Kaiserism, by James W. Gerard. In the introductory notes, Mr Gerard says: In some measure, this book is a continuation of "My Four Years in Germany," the narrative here being carried up to the time of my return home, with some observations on the situation I have found in the United States. What I want especially to impress upon the people of the United States is that we are at war because Germany invaded the United States—an invasion insidiously conceived for years before hostilities began; that this war is OUR war; that the sanctity of American freedom and of the American home depends on what we do NOW.

Europe's Fateful Hour, by Guglielmo Ferrero. The war from the point of view of a great historian, who considers the problems of the war not in the narrow sense of Italy's aspirations, but rather from the point of view of the fundamental causes and issues of the struggle so vitally affecting civilization. The book opens with a discussion of the question of the coming social order and the relation between anarchy and liberty and governmental discipline; the moral and political relations of modern Europe and the coming order, and finally, Italy's function in the great conflict.

"Over There" With the Australians, by Captain Hugh R. Knyvett. The author rose rapidly through the grades of "non-com." up to commissioned officer, and this gives him a chance to reveal his special alertness and ingenuity. He was delegated to the thrilling business of intelligence gathering—the most dangerous and useful branch of the service which this war has developed, on entirely
